Over the summer things quieten down at South Parade as people go on holiday and groups stop meeting for a few weeks. This time of refreshment and rejuvenation helps us prepare for a new season of activity in the Autumn, that kicks off in September with the fourth annual Bramley Fun Day organised by Connect. Read more about this event on pages 9 and 33 and consider if you can help make this a really fantastic day for the community. And then at the end of September the church comes together as one for Vision Sunday - make sure the date (28 September) is in your diaries now.

Watch and Pray

I can't remember what it was that set me thinking about the return of Jesus.

Perhaps it was July's continuing sunshine, or maybe the experience of high-speed dicing with death on Manchester's motorway ring road. The particular thread of thought led me to that amazing declaration that "every eye will see him" (Revelation 1.7). How could that happen? What would make it possible for everyone to see him at the same time?

When I was a boy, television was still relatively new. One of our regular preachers sonorously announced that God had pre-ordained the invention of BBC TV so that Revelation 1.7 could be fulfilled. One person worked it out that this meant that Jesus would not return on a Sunday on the basis that no self-respecting Christian would ever switch on such an instrument of Satan as a television on the Lord's Day, and since his main purpose in coming back was for the Christians... church people can be so silly sometimes!

The other night as the Commonwealth Games were opened, the cyclist Sir Chris Hoy and actor James McAvoy made an appeal on behalf of the children's charity UNICEF.

Every viewer around the world was invited to text the word "FIRST" to 70333 to trigger a £5 donation. McAvoy said, "This has never been done before – this many people all coming together to make a difference..." Within minutes half a million people had donated £2.5 million between them, an amount that continued to increase over the following days.

In a simplistic way this does offer a possible solution to the question of how there might be a mass viewing of Christ's return – all we need is a blanket distribution of smart phones. But it also presents some problems. On the one hand it raises our hope in the ability of human beings to work together to alleviate poverty and sickness. But it also begs the question as to why, despite worldwide media coverage, we stare helplessly at images of conflict between Hamas and Israel, or Isis and Iraq, or seem powerless to prevent the bloodbath in Syria or ease the tensions between Ukraine and pro-Russian separatists. Clearly there's work to be done. Every eye will see Jesus – that's the promise of Scripture. But that doesn't mean universal repentance. An emotional response to a well-crafted appeal is not the same as a deep and lasting change of heart. We still need pioneering disciples who will reach out to others to call them to faith. We need people who will travel to join them in strengthening the work of Christ. We need settlers who know how to bring stability and who confidently hold the ropes of prayer and support while others push the boundaries of mission.

I don't know how every eye will get to see Jesus. That's not really important. The more important matter is that people are enabled to see him with the eyes of faith. May God's people come together to make a difference so that many may see and believe.

As the Son of God is stricken;
Then see His foes lie crushed beneath His feet,

This vict'ry march continues till the day
Ev'ry eye and heart shall see Him.*

Caroline Brown

Caroline Brown was sent from South Parade for ministerial training in Bristol three years ago. She recently sent this update on her progress.

'There is a time for everything, and a season for every activity under heaven' (Ecclesiastes 3.1)

Greetings from Bristol! Another year - the final year- has passed at the Bristol Baptist College and this is a photo of myself (far left) with the rest of the 2014 ministerial leavers... I still don't know where the last three years have gone and I don't think it has sunk in yet that I have actually achieved a degree in theology!

It has been challenging and at times very hard, but it has also been joyful and fulfilling with many, many laughs

Looking back at my time at college, I can honestly say that it has been the best thing I have ever done...

the learning has been incredible, the reading has been intense (I have never read so much in my life before!), the opportunity to be part of two churches in Bristol, and visiting others, has been a real privilege, and being ever aware of the Lord's forming hand upon me has been interesting, exciting and moving - in my opinion, the best part of training.

Yes, it has been challenging and at times very hard, but it has also been joyful and fulfilling with many, many laughs. Throughout my time at college, I have been regularly reminded of what I used to do within the NHS when I received a calling into ministry amongst God's people and reminded particularly of the Lord's help and guidance... I have realised that these past three years have occurred at the right time and have actually built on the opportunities of formation and growth received through my previous career and life experiences, along the wider journey of my Christian discipleship.

Although college life has come to an inevitable end, the learning, reading, serving and forming continues as I wait upon the Lord for his direction of where my next step will be, as I wait upon the One who calls me forward on His path. At present, I am staying in Bristol and I am still in the process of finding a church to settle in for my next stage of pastoral ministry, but, as all time is in God's hands, I am also learning to embrace the present opportunity to be still, quiet, rest and recharge from the busyness that has been.

Your prayers have been, and still are, very much appreciated and when I have any further news of my next step, you can be sure that I will let you know.

God bless you all,

Caroline Brown

Message on a Parachute

Cragg Visit to South Africa

Cragg members Helen Wilson and Duncan Stow are taking a parachute with them this August to Zulu children in South Africa with messages from children at Cragg Baptist Church, Horsforth High School and Ducklings Nursery. They are hoping to twin Ducklings with a Zulu nursery. Each group have written their messages on a particular colour and the Zulu children will in turn write their messages to Horsforth on the parachute.

*Please pray for the Gnanakans say thanks

The Gnanakan family's recent visit to Leeds was appreciated by the whole church. Chris sent his greetings after they had left:

To our dear mission partners at SPBC, “real” warm greetings from Vietnam, I’ve had a fruitful two weeks in Thailand and Laos!

Just a note to say a heartfelt thank you! for your welcome and the awesome opportunity to share our life and ministry with each of our five missional communities! Your love, care and sacrificial giving: first of yourself, service and substance to us as your missionaries moved us and keeps me going with the Gospel to the unreached and persecuted within Asia!

One of the tools I left with you in my series “equipped” was intercessory praying. I’ve been thinking of this in Philippians 1.1-7, how true when you care deeply enough to have someone on your mind (remembrance) and in your heart, you will also have them in your regular prayers! And I may add, care enough to take time, as Paul did for this church, to write to them! So be assured of my prayers for your witness in Leeds, UK. We do know you are praying for the Gnanakans, I feel it as I go into these restricted access countries...

Italy News

David and Ann MacFarlane our link missionaries with BMS World Mission in Reggio

Calabria, Italy recently sent news of a mission.

We will be having two weeks holiday in August and we cannot wait as we feel after home assignment then the mission we have not stopped.

Summer Mission at Reggio

The mission was brilliant. We were on the streets six nights dancing, testifying, singing, puppets sketch board and all. There were at least 35 people from the church every night and we spoke to a good number of people. For the last two Sundays we have had six new people attending.

BMS World News

Brightening Ugandan homes with gravity

Lighting up lives in western Uganda, without batteries, kerosene or even the flick of a switch.

Gravity has given Ugandans a way to see in the dark.

Our very own alternative energy enthusiast, BMS

World Mission worker

Gareth Shrubsole, found out about a new and innovative lighting solution, from a company called Deciwatt, and has taken it to rural locations across Kasese District to see if it works.

“If you’ve grown up with electricity all your life then a room with only a gravity light seems pretty dark,” says Gareth. “However if, like much of the world’s population, you live without electricity... then GravityLight is a life changer!”

GravityLight is made up of an adjustable LED light fitted on a motor and two hanging bags of stones attached by a plastic strip. When all were fitted together, Gareth’s recipients were astonished to discover they could create light lasting for up to 25 minutes by lifting the heavy 12kg bag of stones and letting it fall.

And, while the light produced is currently only around 0.1 watt, Gareth thinks that the potential impact is huge.

“One thing stood out from almost all of the respondents,” says Gareth, “whether collectively in a church, or individually in their houses or workplaces – people used their new free lighting to read their Bibles.

“God blessed mankind with ingenuity and creativity,” Gareth continues, “and that’s why I’m so excited about the potential of gravity lighting technology. These lamps are not yet that impressive, but I have absolute faith that the clever people who made them will very soon make even better ones, and those ones will really change lives here in Kasese, and elsewhere.

“This is a technology I can love.”

Raining miracles in southern France

Prayer has led to a miraculous breakthrough for BMS World Mission workers in France.

Robert is in agony. The pain in his arm is so strong that he can’t sleep at night. Ana* and her husband are seriously stressed over debts they cannot pay. Lucy can’t walk because of severe pain in her kidneys.

*After her second prayer, Robert felt better
but still had pain
After five prayers, he was completely healed.*

What do they have in common?

God has miraculously worked in all of their lives thanks to the ongoing prayer of BMS mission workers Claire-Lise and David Judkins.

Robert, the Judkins’ neighbour in Calvisson, experienced the first miracle. When Claire-Lise heard about his pain, she offered to pray for him. At first nothing happened, so she tried again. After her second prayer, Robert felt better but still had pain. After five prayers, Robert was completely healed.

The next day Ana told Claire-Lise her good news. “God has provided a miracle for me and I am so excited,” Ana said. David’s prayers for Ana and her husband’s dire financial situation had been answered. Their electricity bill of 800 euros was paid for miraculously, and in their bank account they found 4,000 euros of credit. Both where the money came from and how the bill was paid remain unexplained.

A week later, Claire-Lise went to see Lucy from her Alpha course after hearing about her chronic kidney problems. Encouraged by what had happened to Robert and others, Claire-Lise prayed for healing. Lucy felt heat and something moving in her back. The pain disappeared!

David and Claire-Lise are overjoyed that their prayers for Robert, Ana and Lucy were answered. “After months of praying and feeling like we were walking in the desert, it seems like we have stumbled upon an oasis,” says Claire-Lise.

Raising the Roof

Help for a Guinea-Bissau Church

On a Saturday evening in July a rousing evening of African music and food at Headingley raised funds for church projects in Guinea-Bissau. Jill Karlik explains where the money will go, and asks for help for further projects.

The funds raised paid for the roofing material, which was nailed on and watertight before the rainy season began in earnest

Grateful thanks to the members of the Headingley congregation who led us in singing and drumming for the African-style worship, as well as the many other helpers who made the “Evening in Africa” successful. The funds raised were sufficient to complete payment for the galvanised roofing material, which was nailed on and watertight before the rainy season began in earnest. Refitting of the church now continues beneath its shelter.

One project leads to another. It came to light that the volunteer builders, while having practical skills, did not have enough knowledge of tensions and stresses to design the roof trusses and supports in the most cost-efficient way. I should really like to find someone with knowledge of such principles, a civil engineer or builder, who would be able to go out to Guinea-Bissau to share their know-how in a short-term mission visit. People with other specialist skills to share (eg computer technology, carpentry, car mechanics, tailoring) could join in a group visit or series of visits at around Christmas and New Year, or up to late-March 2015.

That period is the middle of the dry-season and also not quite so hot. Accommodation would be with the pastor's own family. The location is by an estuary with pleasant sea breezes: daily swimming when the tide comes in; a trip by dug-out canoe would be possible. Personal security in the area feels to me about as good as in Leeds and political stability has improved since the elections in March.

And now a third project: a container to ship out chairs and many other items to equip the extended church. If you know of a church disposing of items, please alert me. And if you are turning out things to give to charity, anything re-usable could find a space in the crannies of the container as it gets loaded:

- tools of any kind
- educational materials, eg white-

Fisherman at sunrise on the estuary

- boards, blackboards, projectors, computers
- bikes for evangelists
- catering equipment, eg fridges and freezers
- office equipment and stationery
- audio equipment
- solar panels and peripherals
- good books in English, French or Portuguese
- sewing machines and cloth, eg curtains and duvet covers to be made into dresses or suits for sale
- mobile phones
- camping mattresses
- oil lamps and candlesticks

- regular foam mattresses
- good quality clothing
- clocks
- reading glasses (just magnification)
- toys

If you have something to offer, please let me know. In the case of larger items, I'd be grateful if you could hold them until it's time to load the container, probably mid-September.

International Youth Day 12 August

Creator God, who brings something out of nothing – we thank you for the way that your character, your power and your love are made known amidst weakness, vulnerability, and powerlessness.

On this International Youth Day, we thank you for the gift of young people in our midst, and in our world. We pray that you help us to recognise the authority of the child, the honest insight of the teenager, the wisdom of youth. Open our ears again to the way that your voice falls from the lips of our young people. Open our eyes to the reflection of ourselves that children offer. Open our hearts again to the responsibilities with which they present us.

We think of the plight of young people worldwide. Of the 7.5 million children who will die needlessly this year, because of simple human apathy. We think of those who receive no education, who are forced to flee their homes because of war, who are malnourished, orphaned and stricken with preventable disease.

Show us what it means to listen well to young people, to see the world through their eyes, to hear your voice in theirs. Show us our responsibilities towards the young people entrusted to our care.

Lord God, whose Son was born of a pregnant teenager, who – as a child – taught experts in the temple, and who never reached middle age, show us who we are as we listen to the voice of youth.

Back to School Prayer

God of life and love, we thank you for the new beginning that each day brings. We pray for the young people who will return to school, for those who are moving school, and those who are attending school for the first time. Eclipse anxiety with excitement, that education may be a truly liberating and joyful experience.

We pray for parents who breathe a deep sigh of late summer relief, and for parents who worry on their child's behalf. Awaken in them an awareness of the calling of parenthood, and encourage them through the highs and lows of their privileged ministry.

We pray for young people preparing to leave for university. Equip them with all that is needed on the road to independence. As their parents face a miniature grief, comfort them with the assurance of your presence with them and their children.

We pray for all who long for a new start. Reveal yourself to them as the God whose mercy is new every morning. You who have promised to restore the years the locusts have eaten, restore to us this day a deep love for you, a renewed desire to please you, a passion to receive the future you have planned for us.

A Week in the Life of...

...CAP Manager Andrew Bedingham

Wednesday

10 am to 12 am in the office catching up with admin. At 12 o'clock a client rings to say that he has no food, so I stop the admin and take him to the Food Bank and collect 4 bags of food, before driving him home. 2pm to 4pm – more admin.

Thursday

CAP first visit to Miss J in Bramley from 10.30 to 12.30. Then lunch before collecting D and taking him to see his doctor. Doctor complains that client is alcohol dependent. I argue that the issue is pain management and not alcohol abuse. Doctor challenges D to stay off alcohol until Monday morning. We accept the challenge. Then take D to the chemist to collect his prescription before taking him home. Then back to the office in order to send correspondence to CAP and complete admin. At 6pm go home.

Andrew Bedingham

Friday

CAP second visit to Miss J in Woodhouse from 10am to 11.30am. At the end of our visit, we pray for J, before she offers to pray for us. We feel elated to have had a client pray for us. At 12 o'clock we visit Miss K in Bramley. However the client has only just got up so we arrange to come back in a week's time.

Monday

Return to Alcohol Addiction Unit with D. D is given a breathalyser and produces a reading of zero. Praise the Lord. God does answer prayer. We make an appointment with the doctor to return in a week's time to redo the breathalyser test. Take D to the chemist for his prescription before taking him home. I keep praying for D.

Wednesday

Arrive at the home of D, in order to take him to the Bank and plead for the Bank to waive Bank fees of £150. However D has already left to go to St James for a dressing on his leg. After waiting for four hours he gives up and returns home. Need to arrange another visit to take him to his bank. Due to sores on his legs he walks with great difficulty. Wednesday evening I take 6 women to the Showcase cinema to see "God's not Dead". Life is so hard for a CAP manager.

1.45pm. In the afternoon, a CAP second visit to Miss J in Bramley from 2.30 to 3.45pm and then admin until 6.15pm before heading home.

Working for CAP is very rewarding and I certainly enjoy it, but the CAP work is in danger of stopping unless I can find some women who could spare a couple of hours on a Thursday or Friday to accompany me. As a man, I can not visit single ladies on my own. I am visiting 3 new clients every month and so will have visited 36 new clients before Christmas 2014. So although I may be able to take 6 women to the cinema, I cannot take 36 people to church, the doctor, the chemist, the food bank etc all on my own. I urgently need your help! The fields are ripe and ready for harvest. So please contact me and offer to help. If you are aged between 20 and 80, then just two hours of your time is all that it requires!

*At the end of our visit,
we pray for J.
Then she offers to pray for us!*

Thursday

CAP first visit to Miss P in Horsforth, from 10.30 to 12 o'clock. Back to the office for admin until

The Sycamore Tree

Prison Outreach

Mike Burkett wrote about his work with Leeds City Mission in police cells in the April edition of Intouch. His father (also called Mike) is involved in visiting prisoners at Full Sutton prison in York, and is running a course called The Sycamore Tree Programme, a 6-week Restorative Justice course held in prisons.

The programme is government recognised and sponsored and is accredited by the Open College Network as a means of illustrating the importance of prisoners facing up to the consequences of their crimes.

It is usually conducted by volunteers who are members of The Prison Fellowship.

The course objective is to focus on the story of Zacchaeus, whose encounter with Jesus completely transformed his life. His response to this experience was to give back to his victims four times as much as he stole from them. He also gave half of his possessions to the poor.

I am a member of the team conducting this course in September and I wrote the poem opposite as a means of illustrating the theme.

The Tax Collector

As Zac went into Jericho his victims walked away
It was Friday morning, once again, and time for them to pay

Zac was very clever, he “cooked the books” quite well
Each farmer read his tax bill. Was it wrong, he couldn’t tell.

The community was up in arms, they knew that Zac was bad
But he was backed by Roman law that made them very sad.

When Jesus came to Jericho he went to Zac’s for tea,
Then Zac began to wonder “whatever’s wrong with me?”

“I’m nothing but a thief” he said, “all I do is steal.
I take their taxes and the rest, I don’t care how they feel.”

“What about the children who live down on the farm?
I stole their father’s money and brought them untold harm.”

“Give it back, give it back” I heard my conscience say.
“It’s time to take some action, it’s time for you to pay”.

Then Zac remembered what he’d learnt when he was just a youth.
He’d read the Bible every day. He knew it was the truth.

“You shall not steal”, the Bible said, “It’s written in the law”.
“Those who break this golden rule, must multiply by four”.

So Zac sat down to count the cash he’d stashed beneath the floor.
For every pound he’d stolen he chose to give back four.

Who is to Blame? Disasters, Nature, and Acts of God Robert S White

Bob White digs below the unsettling “acts of God” which we variously attribute to bad luck, a malicious deity, or the Fall. He combines scripture and science to show how the God of the Bible can be seen to be sovereign in all circumstances.

Bob White is Professor of Geophysics at Cambridge

University, and a Fellow of the Royal Society. He is also a Fellow of the Geological Society and a member of the American Geophysical Union. He is Director of The Faraday Institute for Science and Religion at Cambridge University and a devout Christian of long standing. I have known him personally for many years.

John Houghton (FRS and Nobel Peace Prize)

produces an excellent introduction to the book. The question Bob White addresses head-on is how could a loving God allow the occurrence of disasters such as earthquakes, volcanoes, or tsunamis that bring such large scale suffering to humans in our world?

Bob has spent years thinking about this problem. The result is, as Elaine Storkey (Emeritus President of Tearfund) comments, the

The book combines scripture and science to show how the God of the Bible can be seen to be sovereign in all circumstances production of this amazing and significant volume, a wonderful resource for anyone who has ever thought about these issues.

Bob starts by describing the natural phenomena that provide so generously for our well being on Planet Earth. Bob White points out that most of the damage from disasters could be avoided if human communities made proper provision well before the disasters arrived. Unfortunately very strong scientific evidence is being denied or sidelined by influential people including, for instance, many Christians in the United States.

The latter part of the book examines how God fits into this picture. Bob White concludes that we humans must be prepared to accept most of the blame for suffering and death from the world's disasters. He reminds Christians that we have the ability and the responsibility to mitigate the effects of such disasters.

SOUTH PARADE BAPTISTS CHURCH Building Community x Christ

Pentecost, 2014

This Sunday, 25th May: The morning reading is John 2:1-11 – 'Empty Vessels ready for new wine', and the evening is 1 Corinthians 13 – 'What matters most?' We meet as Adel (10.30am, Adel Primary School, Tile Lane – Sue Brady), Connect (11am, Hollybush School, Broad Lane, Bramley – Gaynor Hammond), Cragg (10.30am, Cragg Avenue, Horsforth – Jill Jones), Headingley (10.30am, South Parade, Headingley – Geoff Greer) and as SENT (6.30pm, South Parade).

Questions

Daily Fashions?

Recently a speaker at South Parade suggested that to understand the Old Testament, one should start with Job. It seems that academic theology is unable to re-examine concepts formed almost a century ago, even though knowledge and methods of analysis have expanded greatly.

We can illustrate the problem for scholars with attitudes to Genesis. What we have in written form was produced around 600 BC. Archaeology of the Middle East shows people's migration from about 6000 BC and people who built cities 12000 years ago. Records in an archaic form of writing exist for the area since 3000 BC.

Genesis as we have it was written by Jews in Babylon and approved by the Emperor Darius. It became the authoritative basis of the rebuilt temple cults. It contains frequent passages which reflect the culture that followed King David's imposition of central control in Jerusalem. But is it more than that?

*Can Christians avoid the challenge between revelation, the given truth of God's nature, and the scientist's duty
to follow the evidence?*

There is a Garden of Eden to the west of Lake Van. There were two peoples who joined before moving east. Marriage was instituted. The Euphrates valley was flooded to a depth of 10 metres. Before that the Black Sea was inundated by the formation of the Bosphorus and peoples were driven to higher ground. Hence the question: is Genesis the repository of 5000 years of divine revelation preserved by people who believed in God the Creator of all things and with an oral tradition from over 3000 years, but later edited by people with very little understanding? Does Genesis contain evidence of two complementary oral traditions? Genesis speaks in metaphor of a Creator of all things always engaged in and caring for his Creation.

We know less about Job than we do of Genesis. Job may have been written from Judea in the decline of the Persian Empire. At great length it ends with Job recognising that the pot cannot complain of the potter and his wealth is restored. Even as metaphor it has no room for Grace or Redemption. Compare it with the superb words of Habakkuk 3.17-18. Christians with scientific knowledge cannot avoid the challenge between revelation, the given truth of God's nature specifically in Christ Jesus and the scientist's duty to follow the evidence. The Hebrew Old Testament has words that translate both to "create" and to "make". John Lennox has attempted to shift discussion from design to causation, which Dawkins places as the opposite to randomness in the development of all things.

The evidence is that there was a beginning of time and space that determines our universe, controlled by natural forces. Before that event, we can know or say nothing. There is a reluctance to recognise that everything in the material world is caused by those forces. Augustine in 405 AD knew nothing of these forces and laws, but wrote that "He daily fashions whatever happens in the course of time, from what I call the primordial wrappers". Charles Darwin wrote that there will always be a cause.

*Though the fig-tree does not bud and there are no grapes on the vines, though the olive crop fails and the fields produce no food, though there are no sheep in the sheepfold and no cattle in the stalls, yet I will rejoice in the Lord,
I will be joyful in God my Saviour.*

Preaching Themes and Readings

August sees us looking at some of the great chapters from the Bible. On successive Sunday mornings we will fix our eyes upon Jesus (Hebrews 12), put on the whole armour of God (Ephesians 6), shelter in the safety of God's care (Psalm 91), worship Jesus, the Alpha and Omega (Revelation 1) and celebrate God's generous love (Psalm 103).

The first two Sunday evening themes look at Romans 5 and John 3 and explore the invitation to Christ and receive eternal life. From 17 August to 23 November evening subjects form a series exploring the signs and sayings of Jesus in John's Gospel, taking us progressively through his great miracles and "I am" sayings.

On Vision Sunday on 28 September we will squeeze everyone into Headingley for a celebration of good news stories from the year

In September the morning meetings will focus on different aspects of what it means to be generous Kingdom people, culminating in Vision Sunday on 28 September when we will endeavour to squeeze everyone into our Headingley buildings for a celebration of good news stories from the year, together with a big encouragement to step out in faith for the next year. The theme for that day will be "Pioneers, travellers and settlers", each with their part to play in taking forward the Mission of God. Vision Sunday is also a great time to review our commitment to Christ's service. This includes a challenge to become more involved in one or more of the church's ministries and to re-assess our financial giving as God's generous Kingdom people.

Most Headingley and SENT talks are available on the South Parade website for download at www.spbc.org.uk – there's a link on the front page of the site. In addition some preachers produce fairly full notes and may be willing to make these available if asked.

*You who sit down in the High God's presence, spend the night in Shaddai's shadow, Say this: "GOD, you're my refuge.
I trust in you and I'm safe!"
That's right - he rescues you from hidden traps, shields you from deadly hazards.
His huge outstretched arms protect you - under them you're perfectly safe;
his arms fend off all harm.*

Psalm 91.1-4 (The Message) (17 August)

South Parade meets as five distinctive Mission Communities across Leeds: in Headingley, Adel and Cragg on a Sunday Morning, and as SENT at Headingley on Sunday evenings. Connect meets at different locations in the community in Bramley. We also have projects in Little London and Holt Park. To find out more, visit the website or contact the church office.

Together, we have a shared vision to build community in Christ. We hope that all who meet us will be helped to belong to Christ and his people, will discover what it means to believe in him, and will become all that he invites them to be in character, lifestyle, witness and service.
